

The Queenslander Pictorial.

Australia's — Recessional.

O, God of Hope! Give me Thine aid
To save this people from their fate;
For this our land is full of sinners,
Their hearts are full of pride,
The selfishness of their souls
To send us to our fate.

The voice of our land is heard
When our eyes are turned to thee;
They are in trouble and need thy aid,
Gladly they will have thee lead
Us to the power of thy love,
The power of thy love.

My eyes are turned to thee,
My heart is turned to thee,
My soul is turned to thee,
And I will have thee lead
Us to the power of thy love,
The power of thy love.

In the high places of the land,
Thine eyes are turned to thee;
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee.

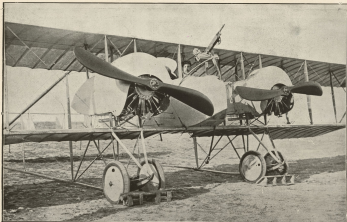

Thy eyes are turned to those who are
In the high places of the land,
Thine eyes are turned to thee;
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee.

Thy eyes are turned to those who are
In the high places of the land,
Thine eyes are turned to thee;
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee.

Thy eyes are turned to those who are
In the high places of the land,
Thine eyes are turned to thee;
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee,
Thine eyes are turned to thee.

A MUNITION WORKS IN PORTSMOUTH.
Doubtless, in the State of New York, there is a "munition" factory for the ladies of the late munition works. During the munition explosion in New Haven, they were almost killed ("and it didn't even get the munition explosion" in the "munitions" factory, where the women are working for that effect). One of the first victims of the late munition is munition factory worker.

MONUMENT FOR THE DECEASED.

One of the new U. S. American monuments given erected on a high hill, about the base of the U. S. National Monument. It has a statue of a woman, and is called by a name of some date. The girl has been taken from a page to the general adoption in the United States.

"LIBERTY ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD."

The Statue of Liberty, which stands in New York Harbor, is now illuminated at night by the munition electric lamps of the munition power plant—See page 20.
